

FROMENTAL

Vesper
Ratio

Vesper is created through a process of controlled water-blooming, creating subtle pools, blooms and shifting concentrations of colour on Xuan papers.

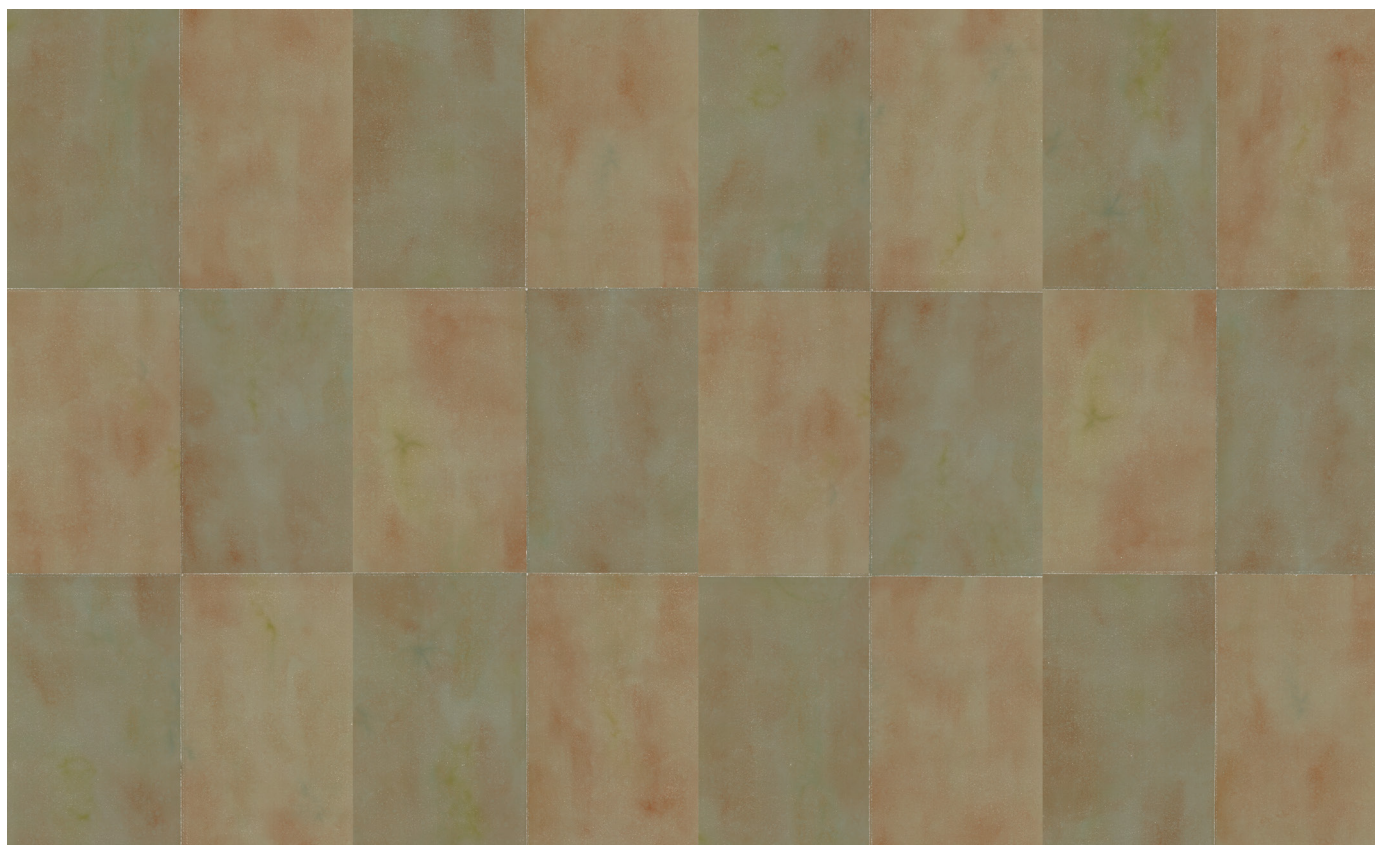

The finished papers are cut into smaller sheets using a bamboo shiv, which parts the fibres rather than slicing them cleanly, for a naturally feathered edge. Alternating shades are layered to build the full panel, balancing subtle variations in ground colour, patina and iridescence, with sheets overlapped and edges sanded to integrate them into the surface.
